

Home of the Chrome

Sunshine Pours Down on Knightstown's Annual Show of Sparkling Classic Autos

Cars and people line U.S. 40 and the Public Square in Knightstown Saturday for the car show.

A Chevrolet Bel Air convertible pulls onto Main Street en route to a parking spot Saturday afternoon during the Cars of Summer show.

Dylan South gets an overhead view of the sites Saturday compliments of his father, Jason South. Both are from Knightstown.

Texaco Museum owner Bruce Trump chats with Model A owner Nancy Swisher Friday evening in Knightstown.

The chrome wheel (left) of a hotrod reflects car show spectators. St. Rose Men's Club member Neil O'Connell (right) fries onion rings.

A chrome hood ornament (left) on a classic Ford roadster. Mike Dull (right) of Richmond shows off his '57 Chevy Bel Air.

Golden Oldies experts Yesterday, a band featuring area residents playing classic tunes, wait to perform at the Knight B-4 event.

Members of the Knightstown High School varsity cheerleading team pose for a photo while selling ice cold water and 50/50 raffle tickets to car show goers.

Photos by Eric Cox